EXHIBIT B

Rockford, Alabama

1835 was year the town was named the County seat of Coosa County, Alabama. This town was built on the site of an ancient Creek Indian village, 13 miles from the highest point in central Alabama. Its name is symbolic of the rocky, river country.

Rockford is a little town of 450 people, with police and fire departments and several small businesses including arts and crafts shops, the county court house and the county jail. There is an ongoing attempt to restore an old school to house more arts and crafts shops.

High school age children attend classes at nearby Hanover Central High School, home of the Cougars. There's lots of good fishing at nearby Mitchell Lake.

The town also has many churches and many community organizations.

Below is a list of facts for Coosa County that Rockford is the County Seat of.
